Buildings that throughout the hours of daylight were resplendent with multicolored flags and bunting in artistic array, gleamed last evening with myriads of electric lights that in symmetrical designs shone like threads of gold against the inky background of the night, happy throngs of thousands, drawn from the ends of the nation and radiant with the spirit of carnival time, after a day of novel entertainment, retired to rest with high expectations for the morrow, a city that had outdone itself in providing festive enjoyment for a host of visitors finally sank to slumber serene in the proud consciousness that the opening day of the great summer carnival was a complete, glorious success, and confident that the remainder of the week of festivity will add final triumph to the fame of the Pikes Peak region for lavish and delightful hospitality.

Thus came to a close the first day of the celebration by Colorado Springs, and her sister cities, Colorado City and Manitou, the fortieth anniversary of her birth a day into the festive mood of which her people entered with an enthusiasm that bespeaks the happiness and optimism of a prosperous and progressive community, and her guests, with a zest that reflects appreciation of the efforts to entertain them and determination to make the most of this unusual occasion.

Never has Colorado Springs presented a more beautiful or animated appearance than yesterday. The morning broke without a cloud in the sky, and hardly had the sun peeked up over the horizon before the crowds were astir. With the business blocks lavishly decorated in the carnival colors, orange and white, and red, white and blue, the downtown district was a veritable bower of beauty. Early in the forenoon the streets were thronged with gay and expectant humanity, presenting a scene of life and brilliancy long to be remembered.

The celebration was formally opened with an address of welcome on behalf of the people of the Pikes Peak region by Mayor H. F. Avery, after which Gov. John F. Shafroth responded for the state of Colorado. A crowd of thousands listened to the addresses, while other thousands and tens of thousands lined the thoroughfares through which the parade of decorated automobiles was to pass.

The parade, the stellar event of the opening day, more than fulfilled expectations, being the most beautiful and magnificent spectacle of the kind ever seen in Colorado. Hundreds of automobiles, most of them elaborately decorated without thought of cost, made a line more than three miles in length, whose splendid appearance drew forth constant admiration and applause from the appreciative spectators. The promptness and order with which this elaborate event was conducted gave gratifying evidence of the competence and thoroughness of the carnival committees' weeks of work.

In the afternoon the scene of entertainment shifted to Roswell park where a crowd of thousands witnessed a novel and thrilling exhibition of the incidents of frontier life, with fearless cowpunchers, drawn from the whole Rocky Mountain region, matching wit and muscle against the wildest outlaw horses. Indians who a generation ago roamed in primitive freedom these very plains living again, but in play, the bloody conflicts of frontier days, and all the other striking features of the once "wild and woolly" west, whose wildness and woolliness persists where a quieter civilization has not yet turned the range into farms or broken bucking broncos to the plowshare.

At 6 o'clock the dress parade of the soldiers of the Second regiment, Colorado National guard, at their camp in Ivywild, which was reviewed by Governor Shafroth entertained many, and thousands more brought the day's enjoyment to a climax by listening to the concert of the Colorado Midland band at South park, or attending the dance at the Stratton park pavilion.

During the evening the streets were thronged and the various amusement places played to capacity houses.

Carnival Formally Opened.

A crowd of several thousand, lining the avenue and seated in the grandstand on Cascade, was present at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, when Mayor Avery arose to make a formal speech of welcome, opening the carnival. Seated in the speakers' box were Governor and Mrs. John F. Shafroth, Mrs. Avery, Mrs. George B. Tripp, Miss Boone of Denver and Col. W. A. Davis.

Yesterday the parade of decorated automobiles typified the gala spirit of the carnival week; tomorrow and Thursday the flights of the bird-men will exemplify the latest and perhaps greatest achievement of modern science; throughout the week the wild west exhibitions give, in replica the life of early frontier days; but this afternoon, in the pioneer and civic parade, will be expressed in visual language that will impress itself indelibly upon the minds of all beholders, the spirit of the past, the achievement of the present and the aspiration of the future.

In this parade really the climactic event of the carnival, will be told in detail minute and graphic, the story of progress which the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the city's birth commemmorates. The story of the days when, master of all he surveyed, the savage Indian roamed the barren plain and silent mountain; the story of the invasion of the paleface in his prairie schooner and the soldiery that came to enforce his demand that the soil be tilled and a new home for the white man be made in the western wilderness; the story of the founding of a border settlement, and finally the story of a large and prosperous community. The tale will be told of a city of magnificent buildings and beautiful homes, of culture and wealth reflecting the best of modern life, of civic patriotism and pride which unite all in the spirit of fraternity lacking which such a celebration as this would not be possible.

Striking Figures Contrasted

As the long and picturesque procession wends through the streets, Indian and soldier, mechanic and millionaire, grizzled pioneer and sleek cosmopolite, cowboy and clerk, will rub shoulders. Prairie schooner and stage coach will vie with touring car and the spectator will turn from the pictures of the past to the realities of the present. Not less strikingly than will be portrayed in kaleidoscopic succession the progress of the last 40 years will be exemplified the spirit of democracy and optimism which are the heritage of the early days and the keynote of the life today of Colorado Springs and the entire Pikes Peak region.

The line of march will be miles in length and from beginning to end it will be one uninterrupted succession of interesting features. Behind the marshal and his aides will come the police and the Midland band, and then in single file the picturesque Ute Indians led by Chipeta, widow of Ouray, the last hereditary chief of the tribe. Scouts, trappers, burros, prairie schooners, Colorado Springs of

WILD WEST SCENES

Exceeding, if possible, the sanguine expectations of the carnival committee that it would prove one of the greatest features of the week, the wild west show at Roswell park, which gave its first performance yesterday afternoon, proved itself the equal of any similar exhibition ever given anywhere in the west, and many who have witnessed the famous frontier day events at Cheyenne declared with enthusiasm that the Wyoming city has never offered a program of frontier diversions excelling this in realism or excitement.

To complete the vivid contrast between the life of 40 years ago and that of today, society was out in force, and, around the open air arena in which cowboys, Indians, wild horses and untamable steers mingled in a colorful and noisy orgy of wild excitement, sat the cream of the wealth and culture of Colorado, keen to appreciate and quick to applaud the daring feats of the intrepid horsemen, the graceful evolutions of the savage-looking Indians and the frantic efforts of vicious broncos and ponderous steers to outwit and outgame their human adversaries.

Fully 5,000 Attend.

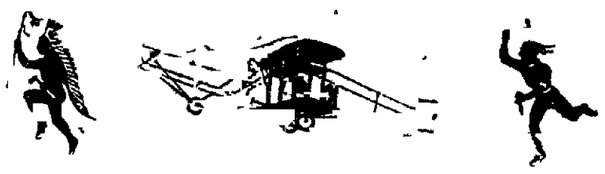

The grandstand was a seething mass of excited humanity, and it is estimated that fully 5,000 persons, to the most of whom the spectacle was a novelty, complete and satisfying, witnessed the exciting exhibition. Not an accident occurred, which was almost a miracle, considering the desperate chances which the broncho busters took in their efforts to make this exhibition one that will be recalled by all with thrills.

Drs. E. R. and Louis McKinnie and P. H. Lennox were present, ready to volunteer their services in case of any mishaps, and although their skill was not needed there is no assurance that with the new and dangerous features to be put on at the succeeding performances they will not be called upon to set some broken bones or otherwise minister to maimed heroes of the range.

Throughout the performance the Rex motion picture machine was in almost constant operation, and pictures were and Major E. J. Boughton of the Colorado National guard.

It is customary on such occasions to present visitors the keys to the city, said the mayor, but in this instance the gates and hinges have been removed, and Colorado Springs wants everybody to go back to the pioneer days of 40 years ago, when the old-fashioned latch key was hanging out. He urged the old people to forget their dignity for a week at least and be boys and girls again. The mayor praised highly the arduous work of the carnival committee and said that the city's guests would be surprised at the great results of their labors in providing all kinds of attractive entertainment.

In introducing Governor Shafroth, who responded on behalf of the people of Colorado, the mayor drew forth a round of applause by referring to him as the governor of all the people. Governor Shafroth dealt in eloquent language with the scenic, climatic and health advantages of Colorado Springs, and its manifold opportunities for wealth and growth, emphasizing the ultimate development of the great agricultural areas to the east of this city as a great factor in the future of a community whose natural advantages, he said, are a certain guarantee of its continued progress. The governor spoke in part as follows:

Gov. Shafroth's Address.

"We should all rejoice on this occasion, for of those who attended the driving of the stake at the corner of Cascade and Pikes Peak avenues, who could have realized 40 years ago that within three blocks of that very point would now be standing an eight-story fireproof building, a magnificent federal postoffice, a fine county court house, the great Antlers hotel, the Mining exchange building and numerous other costly and handsome buildings? At that time the scene was one almost of desolation—nothing but the brown, crisp buffalo grass came into the view of those who laid out this town. But they acted wisely, because of the fact that the greatest mountain in all America is located here. It is not the highest, but it commands the greatest view of the entire American range, and its citadel guards an empire.

"Scenery is one of the greatest assets that can be given to any country. Why? Because it attracts lovers of nature who have the means, to the scenery here, and therefore we find a town which has attractions to keep people here for days and weeks without exhausting its resources.

"Switzerland, with an area of one-seventh that of Colorado, has 3,500,000 people, and the attractions of the Alps are not equal to those of the Rocky mountains. When the United States becomes more densely populated, the population of Colorado ought to and will grow accordingly. Switzerland's only advantage is its mountain roads, and when we get to it, it will not be long before we can go to any part of the mountains in automobiles of other vehicles, and population will increase.

High Praise for Springs.

"Colorado Springs is the greatest health and scenic resort of the United States, and it is said that in the ultimate determination of the life of cities, any city with a healthful climate can never be deserted. Health and climate are invaluable and will continue to draw more and more people here. Scientists are now making tests which show that the blood is more active in the high altitude than at sea level, and has greater resisting power, and when that fact becomes known, then Colorado Springs will get a greater proportion than any other part of the state of the throngs that will come.

"Cripple Creek has been an enormous factor in the development of Colorado Springs, and the rest of the state is proud that this city has received such benefits from it. But there is another thing of great importance to the future. I am convinced that the agricultural lands in El Paso county and to the east of here will in time be inhabited densely, adding to the wealth and population of the county. It was fitting that this city was selected for the Dry Farming congress. You have a city and county here that will command the admiration not only of the state, but of the entire nation. Who could have thought that these dry plains would have such population and wealth as have come to this city?

"Colorado Springs is bound to grow. As Colorado's greatest scenic and health resort, its future is full of lavish promise. Let us have confidence in Colorado Springs. It will go on and on and become perhaps the greatest in the world."

Auto Parade Starts.

Within a few moments after the governor concluded his speech, the automobile of Leonard E. Curtis, chief marshal of the great automobile parade, came down Cascade avenue, and for the next half hour the throngs that lined the wide thoroughfare for block after block, as well as the other streets through which the parade passed, were treated to the most brilliant spectacle of the kind ever seen in Colorado.

The parade formed on North Cascade, near Glockner sanatorium, and came down the avenue at a speed of eight miles an hour, giving the spectators a fine chance to observe the beautiful decorations of the cars, hundreds of which were gay with ornamentations that cost thousands of dollars. The line of march was south on Cascade avenue to Vermijo avenue; east on Vermijo avenue to Nevada avenue; up Nevada avenue to Jefferson street; west on Jefferson street to Tejon street; south on Tejon street to San Rafael street; west on San Rafael street to Cascade avenue; south on Cascade avenue to Cache la Poudre street; east on Cache la Poudre street to Tejon street; south on Tejon street to Cucharas street; east on Cucharas street to Weber street; north on Weber street to Pikes Peak avenue; west on Pikes Peak avenue to Cascade avenue; north on Cascade avenue until the head of the procession passed the rear guard; south on Cascade avenue past the grandstand to the corner of Pikes Peak avenue, where the parade disbanded.

Gay Music—Painted Indians.

Following the chief marshal's car came the Colorado Midland band in a Seeing Colorado car and a smaller machine, discoursing lively music. Then came the city and county officials and fire department, followed by seven automobiles containing the famous Ute Chief, Buckskin Charley, the equally famous Chipeta, widow of Chief Ouray, the other members of the Ute Indian band camped in South Cheyenne canon as the guests of the carnival, and the Santa Clara Indians from the Cliff Dwellers ruins at Manitou. The Indians resplendent in war paint, feathers and gay blankets, smiled and waved their hands at the applauding crowds and seemed to be enjoying themselves immensely.

The exhibit of the fire department, led by Chief McCartin, was attractive, the scheme being emblematic of the idea of the fireman's service in saving children's lives. Two trucks, elaborately decorated, and with a little girl seated on a miniature throne on the second one, attested the enterprise of the fire department.

Then came the first of the beautifully decorated cars, that of F. H. Couture, drawing a huge gondola, named "The Queen of the Peak," in which were a score of little girls dressed in white. Car after car followed, whose magnificent floral embellishments and other decorations brought hearty applause. The various divisions were headed by the marshal's aides, Lewis G. Carpenter, Arthur Littlefield, Charles L. Tutt, George K. Shields and Dr. A. C. Magruder, while Charles Lansing, chief aide, on a spirited horse was kept busy seeing that everything moved like clockwork.

The Oklahoma representation drew the applause of the crowd as car after car sped past, until a total of no less than 73 machines, representing nearly everything in the line of automobiles, had given testimony that Colorado Springs is a great favorite with Oklahomans. On the leading car was the motto: "1910—1,142; 1911—1,978. We Do," showing the number of people from the new state who visit the Pikes Peak region. Texas, Missouri, Iowa and other states were also represented with gaily decorated cars, as were several Colorado towns.

Novel Decorations.

Among the bedecked cars which attracted much attention by reason of their novelty, was the suffragette auto driven by C. M. Foulke of 23 West Dale. With him were J. Granville Moran and Bernard Forman, and all three were made up as women. The car was adorned with suffragette mottos, and at the rear dragged a limp figure labeled "Mere man." Another which brought laughter and applause was the car of Messrs. Gilliback and Young, which looked for all the world like a whole southern plantation, with all kinds of garden produce, a chicken coop and three men made up as negroes. The surprising feature of it was or would be probably to most persons unacquainted with the resources of Colorado Springs—that all the produce was grown here except the watermelons.

H. H. Stevens' car, resplendent with roses, was attractive, and as one after another the most lavishly adorned machines went by, speculation grew keen as to which would win the beautiful engraved silver cups to be awarded.

"Here comes the Dry Farming auto!" One heard it all down the long streets filled with people. Some may have recognized Secretary John T. Burns and his machine, but a majority knew the outward and visible emblems of the congress. Objection might be made to the Dry Farming congress color scheme, because it was a riot of color. Oh! worse than that, a mob-sized insurrection. But the congress is international, and the decorations of the vehicle had taken that into account. The flags of eight nations were utilized, the red, white and blue of the American predominating. The British flag used was a gift to the congress last year by the governor of Alberta, Canada, and the Mexican flag was a present by former President Diaz. The big Brazilian flag was a gift from Laurence Baeta-Neves, vice president of the congress for Brazil.

Dry Farm Products

The mass of golden grains used in such profusion was the feature of the decoration scheme. These were the choicest specimens shown at the Dry-farming congress exposition at Spokane last October, and have been carefully preserved for just such an occasion as this. The bright new rye covering the front was grown this year on the S. and M. ranch east of Colorado Springs. A lot of the material was a gift from C. W. Reed, secretary of the Elizabeth chamber of commerce. Oats and corn displayed were the product of Tillman Reuter of Madras, Ore., and some of the grasses and grains were grown last year at Dalhart and Amarillo, Tex.

A car that attracted much attention was that of Mrs. William C. Sturgis, which received honorable mention. It was made up to represent a huge swan, and the impression of a beautiful bird floating down the surface of a stream was vivid as the car glided smoothly along.

One of the most novel decorative schemes was that of Dr. A. A. Blackman's big touring car, which represented the "Old woman who lived in a shoe and had so many children she didn't know what to do." This car was another to receive honorable mention.

For daintiness, the machine of William Howbert, adorned with white roses, was one of the most noteworthy, and it also came in for recognition by the judges. President and Mrs. Slocum of Colorado college won much applause with their electric, covered with sage brush, and the striking effect produced won this auto honorable mention also.

As an original idea carried out effectively, the touring car of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie G. Carlton of Cripple Creek, representing a camping outfit, won much applause, as well as the prize for the most novel decoration. The car was covered with sage brush, while camp accouterments were displayed conspicuously, and the occupants were dressed in typical camping costume.

The coolness of the Pikes Peak region in the summer time was vividly brought to mind by the machine of Frederick Priebe of 330 East Bijou, which was decorated all in dazzling white, silver and orange, with pines and flowers artistically interspersed. On its top was a perfect replica of Pikes Peak, even to the cog train climbing the snowy summit, and as the machine passed through the streets its occupants threw flowers to the spectators.

BEST DECORATED CAR.—

A beautiful appearance was presented by the big machine of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Anderson of 1501 North Tejon, which was completely covered with white chrysanthemums, of which there were nearly a thousand, all made by Mrs. Anderson and other ladies in the party. This machine was awarded the first prize for general decoration, one of the large silver cups.

The Couture machine, decorated with red roses, and drawing the gondola, was awarded the second prize for general decoration.

Texas was to the front with the artistically garnished car of Mrs. Otho Houston, president of the Texas State bank of Fort Worth, which was awarded the cup for the most handsomely

WINS IN FLORAL CLASS.

Unquestionably the most artistic and effective floral scheme was that on the automobile of William Thayer Tutt, which won the cup for the best floral decoration. The machine was a veritable rose garden, with no less than 7,000 pink roses covering every part of the machine from wheels to top. The white background and the artistic scattering of green leaves combined to produce an effect of surpassing beauty, which was heightened by the white costumes of the occupants.

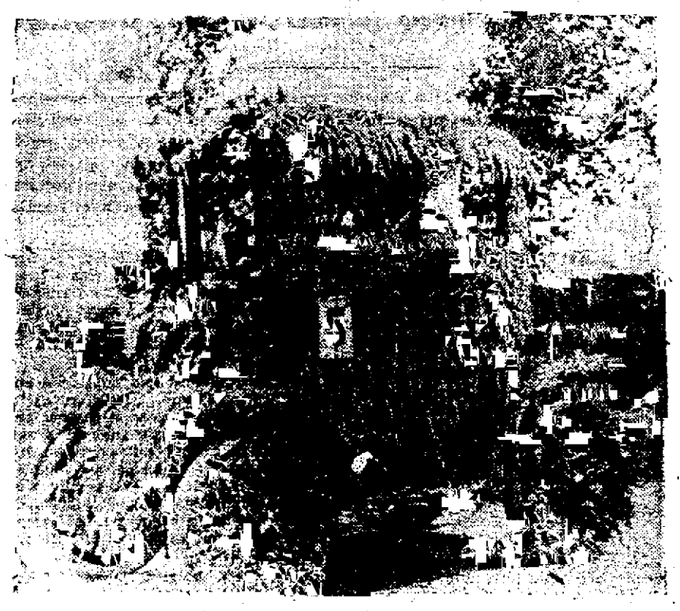

Brilliant with the purple and white of the Elks, the large touring car of Thomas N. Chapman, which won honorable mention, was one of the handsomest in the line. A magnificent elk head added to its striking appearance. Other prettily decorated cars which deservedly received honorable mention were those of Mrs. Wilbur Hemming, garlanded with water lilies; A. R. Allen, brilliant with red poppies; Dr. L. A. Miller, decorated in purple and white, and with a huge dragon fly, held by a little girl, extending over the front.

The car of Mrs. Dr. C. L. Loffler and Mrs. John LeRoy Hutchinson was artistically decorated with the carnival colors, and was one of the prettiest in the parade.

Among other of the more elaborately decorated machines which added to the picturesque brilliancy of the parade were those of the Misses Taft, E. C. Shurer, Major Charles Lowndes, S. D. McCracken, Mrs. Sidford F. Hamp, George Elstun, F. R. Coons, the Misses Ross, Miss Hazel Allen, Miss Clara Costello, Dr. W. W. Williams and numerous others.

The large silver cup awarded to the state having the largest number of automobiles in the parade went to Oklahoma, whose enterprising residents had so many cars in the line that they would have made a good sized procession by themselves. "They must give automobiles away in Oklahoma," was a remark their appearance one after another in seemingly endless numbers, drew forth. The cup was presented to Thomas Tracy, of Oklahoma City, chairman of the delegation, amid great applause, and brought forth an

A visit in the Pikes Peak region without taking "the Cripple Creek Trip" would be like going to Niagara Falls and not seeing the "Falls" or going to Washington and not seeing the National Capitol.

This wonderful ride from mountain top to mountain top over yawning chasms—around loops and along the rims of great gorges to the still more wonderful Gold Camp of Cripple Creek, is acknowledged by all travelers to be the grandest in the world.

FINED FOR STEALING WATER FOR DYING MAN

MONTGOMERY, Mo., July 31.—Warren Zumault, a farmer north of here was fined $10.00 by a justice of the peace at New Florence, Mo., today for stealing water. It was charged that Zumault took water from a well at Sunbeam school house, near his farm.

According to Zumault, a neighbor, "Uncle Johnny" Green, 70 years old, was dying and wanted cool water. The well at the school house was the only place in the neighborhood where water could be obtained. Regardless of the notice not to take the water, Zumault drew several pailfuls for the dying man and was arrested.

BEST DISPLAY AT NIGHT EXCITES GREAT ADMIRATION

Beautiful as is the appearance of the business section of the city in the daytime, with the buildings for block after block festooned in lavish color, it is nothing compared with its appearance at night, with the electrical illuminations as seen for the first time last evening. Wherever the eye turned it was greeted with brilliant lines of light, which stood out like beaded strings of stars against the somber background of towering walls or the deep darkness of the evening sky.

The effect was startling, and elicited the wondering admiration of all who saw it. Never before was such a gorgeous scheme of lighting attempted in Colorado Springs, and nowhere has a more effective display of the magic of electrical illumination been made than that which seemed to turn night into day, and which every evening during the carnival will give the closing touch of splendor to the day's festivities.

The New Burns Theater.

Among the buildings which attracted the most attention and drew forth unstinted admiration is the new Burns theater, outlined in artistic design from top to bottom with strings of red, white and blue lights, the thousands of which used gave forth a brilliant radiance. Above the four large columns of the main entrance were huge white arc lights, and beneath them, circles of incandescents, while at the top of the building two immense red arcs, with a circle of red incandescent globes beneath, gave a vivid touch of color to the illumination. To day many more lights will be placed upon this building, which is one of the showy features of the city's decoration.

The Gazette building also presented a brilliant appearance with row upon row of loosely hanging strings of white lights, with frosted globes which produced an effect of soft effulgence, stretching across the broad front of the building.

Another Striking Illumination.

The towering lines of the Exchange National Bank building were brought out in striking manner by parallel lines of light at the corners extending from ground to roof, and electric streamers suspended across the faces of the lofty structure at every story.

The perspective of lights down Pikes Peak avenue was brought to a stop by the lines of illumination which stretched in golden radiance across the wide front of the Antlers hotel, while festoons swung from the top of the structure at the center. A somewhat similar illuminating scheme was that of the Acacia hotel, which shone with especial brilliance in contrast with the dark foliage of North park.

The Alamo hotel, First National bank building, the city hall and other large structures were lavishly lighted, and the artistic illumination of scores of smaller buildings combined to produce an appearance of surpassing charm and brilliancy.

Along Tejon from Cucharas to Bijou, and on Pikes Peak from Cascade to Nevada alternate strings of red, white and blue lights added a new touch of color. Clusters of large arcs at every corner, and along Nevada from Pikes Peak to Kiowa, two lines of powerful arcs, made it almost as light as day.

MANITOU DEPARTMENT

EVERYBODY IN SPRINGS

Manitou was practically deserted all day yesterday, most of the tourists and a great number of permanent residents attending the opening day of the Springs carnival. All attractions and hackmen report a very light business, and a majority of the business houses might as well have been closed all day. The hotel business has been light for the last few days, many visitors going to the hotels and boarding houses in the Springs in order to see the carnival the entire week. A majority of the merchants will probably close at least for a few hours either tomorrow or Thursday, to let their employes see the aviation meet at Roswell park.

pioneers in carriages, cowboys, including two score or so of the newer generation, and elaborate floats reproducing scenes of other days, will combine to carry the memory or the imagination back to a fast-vanishing past.

Among the other features of the first section of the parade will be floats of the Portland and Golden Cycle mills, a company of the old volunteer firemen, wearing the garb of their day; the wild west performers and a band of Santa Clara Indians.

Volunteer Firemen.

The following is the list of officers and members of the original company of volunteer firemen who signed the constitution and by-laws in 1874 and most of whom will be in the parade:

Foreman, Henry A. True, first assistant foreman, J. W. Fairfield; second assistant foreman, John Potter; secretary, Henry Moody; treasurer, Joseph F. Humphrey; financial secretary, J. W. Gilluly. Members—Alva Adams, W. H. Ambrose, A. H. Barrett, C. T. Barton, Peter Becker, E. W. Boutelle, Charles Cavender, G. W. Cook, Edward Copley, James Correy, T. J. Curtis, Gerald DeCoursey, M. L. DeCoursey, E. D. Dithridge, E. J. Eaton, Fred Ege, J. W. Fairfield, S. C. Foote, Matt France, J. W. Gilluly, W. P. G. Hayward, Charles Holmes, F. E. Huggins, Thomas Hughes, Joseph F. Humphrey, M. E. Irving, F. G. Lombard, W. H. Macomber, H. A. McIntire, J. W. Morris, Henry Moody, S. F. Parrish, Thomas C. Parrish, C. N. Pierce, H. H. Platt, John Potter, J. D. Raymond, D. J. Ronk, W. S. Stratton, George Summers, C. Sweet, J. J. Taylor, G. W. Trimble, H. A. True, J. P. True, W. Wagner, J. C. Wilson, J. E. Wood.

In the second division will be the various fraternal orders in uniformed array, accompanied by beautifully decorated floats in which friendly rivalry for the handsome prizes offered will go to the limit of ingenuity and taste. Next will come a battalion of militia, led by the Second Infantry band. There will be five companies in line, commanded by Major E. J. Boughton.

Following the militiamen will come union labor in solid and sturdy phalanxes, and the floats of the various local organizations will compose one of the most novel and interesting features in the line.

Other Floats.

The Boy Scouts, and the Queen of the Carnival float will lead the next section, followed by Colorado college, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. floats and others representing fraternal bodies.

[illegible] PARADE

exultant round of cheers from the army of Oklahomans present.

Parade Over Three Miles Long.

Among the cars in line were autos loaned by W. W. Price, A. G. Sharp, F. R. McDermand, E. L. Whitney, Arthur Littlefield and A. W. Marksheffel, in which the Indians rode. The hundreds of machines in line stretched out over a space of between three and four miles, and made up unquestionably the most gorgeous spectacle of the kind which this city has ever seen.

After the circuit of business and residence streets had been completed, the cars filed past the grandstand again, where the judges, who found their task a hard one, stopped the machines from which the prize winners were to be selected. Nearly a score of cars were lined up opposite the stand, presenting a striking array of colors, of which the photographers and motion picture men took advantage. While the judges were making their awards, motion pictures were taken of various cars, in one of which were seated Governor Shafroth, Mayor Avery, Chairman Tripp of the carnival committee and the militia commanders.

The judges were O. J. Fleming of Oklahoma, D. H. Fisher of Chanute, Kan., and F. R. McDermand of Kansas City, Mo., all prominent business men, and their decisions were reached only after the most thorough and conscientious consideration of every feature involved.

After the prizes had been awarded the crowds dispersed, and for the next hour the restaurants and hotel dining rooms of the city were almost swamped with hungry people. Immediately after lunch the throngs began to move toward Roswell park for the wild west show, which concluded the day's entertainment, except for the military drill at Ivywild, band concert at South park, dance at Stratton park and various local amusements in progress during the evening.

On every side were heard favorable comments on the day's diversions and the efficient manner in which every detail of the celebration was being handled by the various committees and the many other citizens who have been untiring in their cooperation. Not an untoward event occurred to mar the pleasure of a day that will live in the memory of all who participated in it as one of the most enjoyable of their lives. All looked forward at the close to a succession of pleasures in the remaining days of the carnival.

Manitou and Colorado City will be represented by floats, and the vanguard of the procession will be brought up by scores of elaborately decorated floats representing various business houses.

Besides these there will be many other features which will add to the novelty and interest of the great parade. No part of the population, no element of the life of the Pikes Peak region and no phase of its wonderful evolution within the last two generations will be without representation, and the whole will make up the most impressive pageant the west has ever presented for its own gratification and the entertainment of the stranger within its gates.

The parade is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock p. m., and the thoroughness with which preparations have been made gives assurance that it will start close to the appointed hour. With hundreds of visitors coming in on every train, it promises to be [illegible] as large a crowd as Colorado Springs has ever had the pleasure of entertaining.

Pioneer Reception.

Following the parade, the next event on the program is the wild west show at Roswell park, in which new features will be shown. This will conclude the entertainment until evening, when another of the big events of the carnival will be held—the pioneer reception to be given from 8 to 10:30 o'clock in the county court house. The building admirably lends itself to affairs of this kind, and as the walls are lined with large cases containing the rich treasures reminiscent of pioneer days, the occasion will be one of great interest to the hundreds who will attend.

Mrs. William Wells Price, president of the El Paso County Pioneer association, will receive, assisted by a large delegation of the members of the organization. A special car party from Denver, of those formerly residents of Colorado Springs, and also many from all parts of the state and country will join the reunion of friends of years ago.

That pioneer institution, Colorado college, will be represented by President and Mrs. William F. Slocum. The patriotic organizations will be represented by Mrs. Francis W. Goddard.

Notables Will Attend.

Mrs. Juanita Williams-Foote, daughter of General Frank Baldwin, the first white child born in Durango; Mrs. Mary Winfrey Epperson, who was the inspiration for the character of "Ramona" in Helen Hunt's story, "Ramona;" Mrs. Adams, widow of the noted [illegible] Charles Adams; Mrs. Caro[illegible] Churchill, editor of The Queen Bee, established in 1879, and other notables too numerous to mention, will be present.

Chipeta, Buckskin Charley and his entire band of Indians, who are now the guests of the city, will also be numbered among those attending the reception.

Miss Helen Foster, secretary of the Pioneer association, assisted by Miss Dora Foster, will have charge of the membership and registration books this evening, and all eligible can join the association or place their names on the register.

Mrs. Maine Briscoe and Samuel P. Swinford, Jr., will furnish violin and piano selections. "Colorado," the popular song composed by Mrs. Price, will be sung by Carrie H. Hepns, by special request; "The Old Folks at Home" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" will be sung by Mrs. Jessie Carea Bunn.

One of the most novel features of the week will be the dances of the Ute Indians in their camp near Stratton park, which will be given at 8 o'clock p. m.

The day's events will also include a reunion and dinner by the younger generation of cowboys from 11 to 1 o'clock in the lot south of the postoffice; the band concert at Stratton park at 8 o'clock p. m., and the illustrated Colorado travelogue by Carl A. Balcomb, in the Stratton park pavilion, at the same hour.

GAZETTE--50c A MONTH

William E. Pabor [illegible] of the City He Helped Found

William E. Pabor, poet, pioneer and pathfinder—whose writings under the pen name of "Pikes Peak," nearly half a century ago are cherished still by old time Coloradoans—is in Colorado Springs to help the city celebrate her fortieth birthday.

Just 40 years ago today, Pabor, then secretary of the Fountain colony which founded Colorado Springs, was one of a handful of men who officiated at the birth of the little town east of the Peak, and which since has grown and progressed and prospered far beyond the most optimistic day dreams of its founders.

Not for a moment did the long journey from his home in far off Florida cause this rugged old pioneer to forego the pleasure of coming out into the west for another view of the Rockies and the bright, up to date city that nestles in the shadow of the Front range; neither did the fact that his brow is crowned with white, like that of the great, brown sentinel in stone, deter him in his determination to again see the city which, with the late General William J. Palmer, he helped to create.

While General Palmer was the founder of Colorado Springs and president of the Fountain colony, Pabor was also largely instrumental through his newspaper and magazine connections, in giving needed publicity and advertising to the new health and summer resort.

"Perhaps I have dreamed some dreams in my time," said Pabor yesterday as he watched the opening pageant of beauty and life and color roll along wide avenues that he once knew as stretches of sand and cactus, "but now I know that my dreams of Colorado Springs have come true.

"Forty years ago I was here. There was nothing in the way of habitation but a little log cabin and a few tents—nothing but miles of mountain and sky and solitude, but I shared the belief and the faith of Palmer that the townsite would grow and bloom as a flower in the desert.

Prophesies Great Future.

"And Colorado Springs has not yet entered upon her era of expansion and progress. It is a great city now and its greatness will be vastly increased before another score of years. Sooner or later the three cities, Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou, will be merged into one. This is inevitable. I may not live to see it, but it will come sooner or later."

"It was away back in 1871," went on Mr. Pabor, "that we drove the first stake in the townsite of Colorado Springs. Forty years is a long time to remember, but I recall the circumstance almost as distinctly as though it had happened a week ago. It was just such a day as this, bright and warm, with a cool breeze blowing down from the mountain snow banks. There was quite a concourse of men and women, too, taking part in the ceremony of driving the first stake. But I am getting ahead of my story.

"General Robert A. Cameron was vice president of the Greeley colony and I was secretary. Nettleton was our engineer. General Palmer wrote to Cameron telling him to come to Colorado Springs and take charge of the Fountain colony to found the town of Colorado Springs. Cameron, Nettleton and I came.

"We camped here for about four months making observations and surveys before it was decided to locate the town. The land between here and Colorado City belonged to Boston parties and it was necessary to negotiate with them for its purchase. We tried to locate water north of here by digging wells, but were unsuccessful.

"Soon after that the town was laid out by an engineering corps and maps and surveys prepared. Advertisements were placed in the Denver papers telling that lots were for sale here and in Manitou, then known, I believe, as Fontaine.

Founding the Town.

"Many lots were sold and people began coming. The company put up a hotel at the corner of Pikes Peak and Cascade avenues, and some cottages were also built at Manitou. One of the first things we did was to construct the Fountain ditch to the north so that we would have water for the streets and trees. Many of the trees that were planted then I recognized today.

"Of course there was no travel up Pikes Peak on the eastern side at that time, but General Palmer wanted a road opened up clear to the summit. Nettleton, John Potter, a guide, and myself started to go up the Peak, clambering over boulders and fallen trees as best we could. We got as far as timber line that day, and the next forenoon we reached the top. We came back by sunset and the journey was much easier. I wrote several two-column articles about Colorado Springs and Pikes Peak for the New York Press, then published by John Russell Young.

"A part of each summer I would spend here and would then go to New York and other eastern cities. I opened up an office in New York and got out a lot of advertising matter in the way of circulars, etc., telling about Pikes Peak, Manitou, the Garden of the Gods and Cheyenne canon, and also gave lectures in various cities to get the people to come out here.

"A few years after Colorado Springs was founded Cameron and I organized colonies at Greeley and Pueblo. I wrote a series of poems on all the points of interest around here, which were published in 1872.

"Colorado Springs was located largely because of its many wonderful springs and its points of scenic beauty. We found so many magnificent spots here that our first idea in founding the town was to make it a great resort. It soon became famous, but it was a mighty desolate stretch of plain when we first went over the townsite."

"Yes," said Mr. Pabor in answer to a question, "I have led an eventful life. I was born in Holland, N. Y., in 1834, and received a common school education. When I was 19 years old I started the Holland Times, which lived about six months. Then it died a peaceful death.

"I have been a Republican always, and I cast my first vote for Fremont. I was active in politics and was postmaster at Holland for 12 years. One day I was an advertisement in the New York Tribune, published then by Meeker, calling for a western colony. I knew Meeker personally, called on him, and was the first man to interview him on the Greeley colony. I resigned from the postmastership and came here in 1870 and was secretary of the new colony. A few years later I was secretary of the agricultural colony at Fort Collins and for 10 years edited the Colorado Farmer at Denver.

"In 1881 I predicted that western Colorado would be a great fruit raising section, as its soil was admirably adapted to that purpose. I visited the western slope as the representative of a loan company, and was made superintendent of the first big irrigation ditch in the Grand valley country. To me it appeared as the place to start a town, and in 1884 I persuaded T. C. Henry and others to join in a 640-acre purchase. I laid out the town of Fruita and advertised the section as a great fruit raising region. Then I went to Illinois and purchased a carload of fruit trees of nearly every kind and we set out five and 10-acre tracts in the orchard subdivision of Fruita. I published the Fruita Star for two years, and when Governor Crawford wanted to start a daily paper there I went to Denver to make arrangements for telegraphic service.

"B. W. Steele, then editor of The Colorado Springs Gazette, assisted me with his influence and I secured the franchise for Crawford. His paper, the Grand Valley Star, I edited for about a year. While I was in Denver publishing the Colorado Farmer I published a book on Colorado. Predictions that I made then have since come true—that Colorado would become a bigger state in an agricultural way than through its mineral resources.

Off for Florida.

"Twenty years of activity in Colorado reduced me to a state bordering on nervous prostration, and I was ordered south and to California. Finally I located in Florida in 1891, and in six months I had completely recovered. For 20 years since I have not been sick. I made my home in the southern part of the state near what is now known as Pabor Lake.

"Some years ago I published two books of poems on Colorado, one of which was entitled 'Wedding Bells.' In the latter I took a newly-married couple all over the Denver and Rio Grande railroad looking for a place to spend their honeymoon, finally locating them in Colorado Springs. This was followed by a poem called 'Twelve Inspirations.'"

Mr. Pabor, now in his seventy-eighth year, has retired to a great extent from active business pursuits. For years he has been known as the poet laureate of the National Editorial association which has made him a life member. Every year he is expected to, and does, deliver a poem. At his home in Florida he has extensive orange groves and other orchards. He is widely known as a writer on Florida topics and is associate editor of the Florida Review and on the editorial staff of the Florida Agriculturalist.

"I would like to see some of my old friends," said Mr. Pabor. "I would be glad to meet them if they will leave word at The Gazette where they can be found. I will stay in Colorado Springs until the anniversary celebration is over, at least."

Yesterday Pabor revisited the spot where, 40 years ago, he helped to drive a stake, one of the first official marks in the townsite of Colorado Springs. The spot is designated today by a granite slab at the southeast corner of Pikes Peak and Cascade avenues.

A year before Pabor came, General Palmer received the inspiration to found a city in the then little known west. On a surveying trip from Denver he stopped here long enough to conceive the idea of founding a town. Colorado City was then, in 1870, a frontier village with a population of less than 300. Denver boasted of a population of perhaps 3,000, and Pueblo, about 1,000. At that time General Palmer, representing the Kansas Pacific railroad, which was pushing its way westward from Kansas City, was sent out to blaze the way for the extension.

Building the Rio Grande.

A line was built to a point about 40 miles east of Colorado Springs, and here the Kansas Pacific ceased its extension because no financial assistance was given by the government. General Palmer foreseeing the possibilities of a railway along the base of the mountains, raised funds for the enterprise. The new road was the Rio Grande, running south from Denver.

The purchase of tracts of land, among which was the Colorado Springs site, was the next step in the plan of empire building achieved by General Palmer. The organization of the Fountain colony followed, and when it was decided to make this a prohibition town, the Colorado Springs company was formed, which purchased the original 9,000 acres of the Colorado Springs townsite.

For 20 years after the city was founded, Colorado Springs was known only as a health resort. The discovery of gold in Cripple Creek in 1891 occasioned a boom of another sort, and there was a rush of gold-seekers from every point of the compass. Hundreds of arrivals poured into Colorado Springs, mining companies were formed and claims staked out, and in the whirl of excitement the real reason for which the city was laid out was overlooked. The opening of mines in Cripple Creek sent other railroads reaching out their long arms, and the Colorado Midland and finally the Cripple Creek Short Line were pushed up and across the mountains into the great gold camp that has since proved a bonanza.

Colorado Springs has never been regarded as an industrial center, and in this respect the ideas of its founder have not been changed. Primarily it is a city of homes, a spot where nature has been prodigal with her favors, a place admirably adapted because of its delightful climate and wonderful scenery, to become the playground of a nation.

[illegible] AMBASSADORS [illegible]

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Although President Taft and Secretary Knox are expected to have a final conference within a few days to determine on important readjustments of the diplomatic service it was reported on high authority today that John G. Leishman, American ambassador to Italy, has been selected to succeed David Jayne Hill, who resigned last spring as ambassador to Germany. The same authority was responsible for the statement that if this shift is made Thomas J. O'Brien, at present ambassador to Japan, will be sent to Rome to succeed Mr. Leishman. A successor to Mr. O'Brien, it was said, is yet to be picked by the president and Mr. Knox.

In case it is decided not to send Mr. Leishman to Berlin it was understood today that Robert Bacon, now ambassador to France, probably would be considered and Mr. Leishman transferred from Rome to Paris.

Democratic Senators to Support Free List

WASHINGTON, July 31.—After two lengthy caucuses today the Democratic senators late tonight unanimously decided to support the farmers' free list bill passed by the house and which will be voted upon tomorrow in the senate. At the same time the Democrats of the house committee on ways and means at a night meeting formally decided to recommend to the house tomorrow that it ask the senate for a conference on the wool tariff bill.

AFTER INHERITANCE TAX ON ISAAC WYMAN ESTATE

DENVER, July 31.—Attorney General Benjamin Griffith and his second assistant Philip W. Mothersill, are endeavoring to secure for Colorado an inheritance tax upon $35,000 of the estate of Isaac Wyman of Massachusetts. Wyman held an interest to this amount in the Book Cliff Railroad company in Mesa county.

Wyman left several million dollars for Princeton university. The executors contend that as Princeton university is an educational institution not for profit, an inheritance tax on bequests made to it is not collectible.

A Little Sage and Sulphur Makes Gray Hair Vanish. A Remedy for All Hair Troubles

Who does not know the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special agents, Pikes Peak Pharmacy Co., Colorado Springs Drug Co.

POSTOFFICE BUSY; NEW THROUGH AUGUST

Postoffice employes, especially those at the general delivery window worked harder yesterday than for a long time, the building being thronged nearly all day. This in itself is testimony of the great number of people here for carnival week. It is estimated that the crowd was perhaps the largest in the history of the postoffice.

Postmaster Strachan yesterday received official notice of the installation, August 28, of a postal savings depository in the Colorado Springs postoffice, from Postmaster General Hitchcock. The note was a personal, rather than a business letter and stated that in a day or so a postoffice inspector will arrive and explain the details of the postal savings system. Mr Strachan is requested by the postmaster general to place the most trusted employe in charge and to report direct to Washington at the close of the first day's business as to the number of accounts opened.

A DAINTY TOILET ARTICLE

Every lady who desires to keep up her attractive appearance, while at the Theater, attending Receptions, when shopping, while traveling and on all occasions should carry in her purse a booklet of Gouraud's Oriental Beauty Leaves. This is a dainty little booklet of exquisitely perfumed powdered leaves which are easily removed and applied to the skin. It is invaluable when the face becomes moist and flushed and is far superior to a powder puff as it does not spill and soil the clothes.

It removes dirt soot and grease from the face imparting a cool delicate bloom to the complexion. Sent anywhere on receipt of 10 cents in stamps or coin. F. T. Hopkins, 37 Great Jones St. New York.

FIVE MILITIA COMPANIES ATTENDING THE CARNIVAL

A battalion of 200 men of the Second regiment, Colorado National guard in command of Maj E. J. B[illegible]ton of Cripple Creek, lends the necessary military touch to the carnival. There are five companies in the battalion as follows: Company A, Colorado Springs, in command of Capt H. C. Frost; Company B, Trinidad, Capt J. C. Lund; Company C, Lamar, Capt F. D. Householder; Company [illegible], La Junta, Capt Frank Bartlett, and Company K, Victor, Capt S. Percy Jones. The Second Regiment band of 20 pieces from Victor is also detailed.

The infantrymen will remain here until tomorrow night, and will maintain strict camp discipline at their bivouac near the Zoo ball park. This morning at 9 30 o'clock, guard mount will be celebrated, and the public is invited to the ceremonies. Last night at 6 30 o'clock battalion review and parade was held at the camp in honor of Governor Shafroth. This morning regular camp discipline will be exemplified in what is known as open order work.

Lieutenant H. C. Nickerson of this city is adjutant of the battalion and Sergeant Horace Ragle also of this city is quartermaster and commissary sergeant.

Captain A. H. Hardy will not be able to appear at Roswell park this afternoon as was announced owing to the illness of a member of his family. L. P. Lawton talked with Captain Hardy over the phone yesterday afternoon and the famous marksman, now in Denver who is perhaps the best fancy pistol and rifle shot in America said he will not be here until Friday afternoon when he will give an exhibition of his wonderful marksmanship in conjunction with the wild west show.

Captain Hardy has taken part in nearly all wild west shows for the last 10 years. He will be assisted Friday by Harry Keefe and Max Hensler both of whom are good shots. The captain will use a shot gun in addition to his rifle and pistol and show what can be done with this sportsman's weapon.

SUSPECTS CAUGHT [illegible]

George Miller, Frank Woods and Walter Mulvinhill, suspected of being the men who have committed several robberies in Pueblo recently, were arrested here by the police yesterday morning. They were hiding in a box car in the Denver and Rio Grande yards.

Two officers from Pueblo took the prisoners to that city last evening. One of the men had a gold watch in his pocket, which it is believed, was carried by a Pueblo saloonkeeper who was held up and robbed Saturday night. One of the holdups was shot and killed. The men arrested here refused to talk.

OKLAHOMA VISITORS TO HAVE OUTING

Special arrangements have been made with the management of the Colorado Midland railway for Oklahoma day on their Wildflower excursion next Thursday, August 3. The train will leave Midland-Santa Fe depot at 9 a. m., Manitou 9 31 a. m. and return home at 5 20 p. m. It is expected that a large number of Oklahoma visitors will avail themselves of this opportunity to get together. The railway company have had an appropriate badge made, which may be secured at their office at 121 East Pikes Peak avenue or opposite Postoffice, Manitou.

MORE TOURISTS COMING

Forty tourists will arrive at 8 45 o'clock tonight over the Denver & Rio Grande and will spend the following two days here taking in the carnival. The visitors compose a northwestern excursion and sightseeing party, and are bound east coming here from Ogden, Utah.

On the train they will take east will be the J. L. Servis party which comes here annually. Servis is a Rock Island conductor who spends his vacation of 30 days annually in touring the country with a party of 25. This will make the fifteenth consecutive summer he has come here. They will probably stay for the rest of the carnival.

TEMPERATURE RANGES FROM 47 TO 79 DEGREES

The lowest temperature of the month was felt yesterday morning, the thermometer registering 47 degrees at 5 o'clock and mounting to 79 at noon. This variation of 32 degrees in a few hours time was so great as to cause many to believe it exceedingly hot at midday.

Business Suspended Tomorrow Afternoon

All the business houses and offices of Colorado City and Manitou will close tomorrow afternoon, to give their employes an opportunity of witnessing the aviation meet at Roswell park. Many will also close this afternoon during the parade. The grocers and butchers will close Thursday afternoon, instead of tomorrow, so that their employes will see the aeroplanes in flight on the second day of the meet. Even the drug stores will close tomorrow from 2 to 5 p. m., so general is the holiday spirit throughout the region.

The banks, which will close all day today in honor of Colorado day, will also close at noon Thursday. The postoffice will be closed from 2 to 5 p. m. today, and there will be but one delivery. The office will be open from 5 to 7 p. m.

The Rio Grande ticket office will be closed this noon, and tickets and Pullman reservations may be secured at the depot.

secured which will later give to millions of people throughout the country a view of the hair-raising stunts which Colorado Springs is providing for the entertainment, particularly of its eastern visitors.

Broncho Busting.

The first event on the program was the broncho busting, and Jack Ashbaugh, a noted Wyoming cowpuncher, furnished the opening excitement by a successful ride on Iron King, after which Jim Thomas had a spirited seance with Bonehead, a wiry little beast that for several minutes successfully evaded all attempts to saddle him.

Simple Susan, a vicious, powerful sorrel, with a peculiar crisscross style of bucking, lived down the stigma of her name by giving Ashbaugh the time of his life and the spectators enough excitement to last them for a week. Susan lay down and rolled over, smashed into a fence and tried in a hundred other ways to commit voluntary manslaughter on the person of Ashbaugh, but succumbed in the end. Once she threw her rider, but he leaped to her back again, and after 10 minutes of furious combat brought the animal to a stop, thereby accomplishing a feat which no other man has yet been able to perform.

Chaps Dewey, Blazeaway and Rooster all furnished excitement, after which Cry Baby, a little mare with a peculiar style of bucking and no disposition to live up to her name, kept the crowd amused with an exhibition of equine contortions far out of the ordinary.

"Sitting Bull."

Then came one of the big features of the day, with a huge steer as the main performer, which was not exactly on the program. While Wilbur Ireland, the 12-year-old son of B. J. Ireland, was trying to mount the animal, it broke loose and started up the track at breakneck pace, with a small regiment of horsemen in pursuit. Round and round the track the great beast tore, eluding every attempt to rope him, until finally, after he had covered at least a couple of miles, he tired and was thrown. By that time the animal thought he had done a day's work and sat down on his haunches, ignoring every effort to make him move. The cowboys bit his ears and his tail and resorted to every other puncher's device to make him mad, but "Sitting Bull" was obdurate, and in the end it became necessary to get another animal.

The smaller animal selected furnished an exhibition that satisfied the most critical excitement seeker. Wilbur Ireland tried to ride him first, but gave it up after being tossed to terra firma twice, and Ashbaugh then gave another demonstration of his prowess by sticking to the animal's back until it had enough.

The Cowgirl Race.

Jane Magruder of Montana and Stella Williams of Colorado Springs, two clever horsewomen, furnished excitement with a cowgirl race, won by the former by a narrow margin, after which the two gave an exhibition of lariat throwing as did Black Diamond, a performer of Ethiopian persuasion. Diamond's ability at fancy roping kept the crowd in a roar with laughter.

A stage holdup, billed as the star attraction, played all that was claimed for it, and the spectators were treated to a realistic reproduction of one of the frequent bloody incidents of frontier life. There was shooting galore, and if the performers had not used blank cartridges, there would be no body left to go on with the performances which will be given every day this week except tomorrow and Thursday, the aviation days.

Ring tilting by B. J. Ireland and a wild horse race brought to a conclusion an exhibition that in all its features is a faithful and stirring reproduction of the frontier days when the west of today was really wild and woolly, as so many unacquainted with it believe it still to be.

Many a Colorado Springs Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Colorado Springs. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Mrs. John Hill, 1202 Grant street, Colorado Springs, Colo., says: "I have nothing to retract from the public statement I gave in December, 1906, regarding my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. They benefited me wonderfully at that time and I hold just as high an opinion of them now as when I first spoke of their praise. I had a burning sensation in my back and suffered greatly from pains through my loins. My limbs often became badly swollen and the kidney secretions were scanty and unnatural. Friends told me that the symptoms were those of kidney complaint, and being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at the D. Y. Butcher Drug Co.'s. The contents of one box made a decided improvement and I continued taking this remedy until my trouble had been driven away. My willingness to again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills is due to the fact that my cure has been permanent."

PLAN FLIGHT OVER CRIPPLE CREEK; RETURN OVER PEAK

P. O. Parmalee, star aviator of the Wrights, who arrived in this city yesterday, will make an attempt to sail from Colorado Springs over the Cripple Creek gold camp and return around Pikes Peak. Whether this is possible depends on the weather and the start he gets, and if these are favorable he says, the gold camp will see a biplane floating above it before the week is over. He is registered at the Antlers hotel, and, in company with T. Clifford Turpin, his companion aviator, he ate lunch yesterday in full view of the Peak he will encircle, remarking several times that it will be "a hard flight." As a matter of fact, this will be his most dangerous attempt to win records and glory, but the fact did not seem to bother him much, for he consumed a meal of large proportions.

Immediately after dinner the two boarded a car for the aviation grounds at Roswell park to inspect the runway from which they will ascend. Both seemed concerned by the way the wind blew, which was rather hard around 1 o'clock. He declared their greatest difficulty will be in getting a good start, owing to the high altitude. At Ogden, Utah, he said, it was fully a half hour's work to get the biplanes off the ground, and the altitude there is about 3,000 feet lower than here.

"A great difficulty will be the winds which circle around the mountain peaks," said Parmalee, "and the thinness of the air. I am in hopes we will have much lighter winds lower down. Depend on it, though, we are here for business, and we are not overlooking any bets. This is probably the last public exhibition the Wrights will give, as they want to devote their attention to the commercial side of the business, and we are here to make a world's record if we can."

"Will you take up any passengers?" Parmalee was asked.

"No, it will be impossible. In this high altitude we cannot even carry full tanks of gasoline. It would be doubt, dangerous, not only to the aviator, but to the passenger."

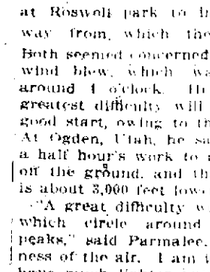

Parmalee, like his companion, Turpin, is a square-jawed young man, with a clear eye and a healthy color. Both seem to look on every side but the dangerous one of their profession, and neither is long on mauling remarks about the chances they are taking.

BURY PIONEER WOMAN

DENVER, July 31.—Funeral services were held this morning for Mrs. Anna Miller, Colorado pioneer, and once a prominent Leadville business woman, who died of old age at the home of her sister, Mrs. Mary Logan, here.

Mrs. Miller came to Colorado in the early '70s with her husband, A. B. Miller, who engaged in the mercantile business. In 1879 they moved to Leadville, where he became interested in mines, and after his death a few years ago, she conducted the business.

The Wonderful
Cave of the Winds
MANITOU

In which Colorado possesses the most Unique and Inspiring Natural Wonder of America.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

One Million years ago the Ocean itself covered the ground where Manitou stands. A brief time later Volcanic energy raised the Sea bottom to above Sea level. The Sea mud dried and hardened into Limestone. Occupying less space than the Sea mud, the Limestone pulled apart and was filled with cracks. Vegetation appeared and, later, became prolific. Decaying Vegetation produced a copious supply of Carbonic Acid; this Acid sank into the cracks and ate deeper into the Limestone, causing large Cavities. As the Cavities expanded or grew they touched each other and left a connecting hole between.

Half a Million years ago an Earthquake opened a huge Crevice in the Earth's surface, exposing one of the Cavities in the Limestone; and in due time, Man, finally appearing, entered the open Cavity and passed through all of them.

LOOKING FORWARD.

The Crevice is now Williams Canon; the Cavities, or Rooms, thus connected are the Wonderful Cave of the Winds; and the Brilliant Electric Light completes the "Transformation."

The rare Crystals of Onyx Calcite and Alabaster with which the Ceilings and Walls of these Sixteen large Rooms are veneered are by Natural Law formed only in the Dark; they never exist where Daylight is encountered.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1911.

A GOOD START

IDEAL weather, a record-breaking crowd and a well-managed parade with more automobiles in line than were ever before grouped in one body in Colorado, combined yesterday to make an auspicious beginning of Carnival week.

Nothing better could have been asked or expected. Since the beginning of the Carnival movement there has been no lack of public interest in the enterprise, but even the most enthusiastic boosters scarcely expected such a display of live, aggressive public spirit as was shown yesterday. Hundreds of motor cars of every make and description were in line, all of them decorated and most of them decorated in a way which showed the expenditure of much time and money. Several owners were represented by two or three machines each.

Colorado Springs is the biggest little automobile city in the United States and a big turnout on this occasion was to be expected. But it almost took one's breath away to see how the out-of-town delegations responded. Texas, Kansas, and Arkansas were well represented, but it remained for Oklahoma to lay all visiting competitors in the shade with a turnout of seventy-three motor cars. This number may not look impressive in print, but if we allow seventy-five feet to each machine which was about the average distance apart it is apparent that the Oklahoma delegation occupied a little more than a mile of distance in the parade. It is a striking commentary, not only on the enterprise and hustling spirit of our visitors from the Empire State of the Southwest, but it shows too what an important thing for Colorado Springs is the patronage of these visitors. It is probable that not more than one-half of the Oklahoma cars which are now visiting in the Pikes Peak region were in the parade, which means that about 150 automobile parties from that State alone are now sojourning here.

Six beautiful silver cups were awarded as prizes, yet as is usually the case there were so many meritorious exhibits that it is a pity that the prize list was not twice as long. The honorable mention given eight others was in every case deserved, and the Committee had no little difficulty in deciding just which cars belonged in the one class and which in the other.

WILD WEST IS THE REAL THING.

To Eastern visitors whose ideas of the picturesque life of the frontier have been gained entirely from books and from stagy, artificial "Wild West" shows of the professional variety, the exhibition at Roswell Park yesterday was a revelation. It is small in comparison with the big professional shows, but it is the real thing. It was organized especially for the Carnival, and every man engaged in it is a bona fide cowpuncher and broncho buster whose regular employment is doing the very stunts on a cattle ranch which he is doing this week at Roswell Park for the entertainment of spectators. The horses used are real "outlaws" which do not have to be persuaded to buck. They do it naturally, willingly, even gladly, and they do it as an outlaw should—from no other motive than a spirit of pure cussedness.

The Wild West show was organized expressly for the Carnival by Mr. B. J. Ireland, a ranchman near Fountain who has had considerable experience in the conduct of such affairs. He selected his assistants from among his acquaintances, all of whom are veteran cowmen. These men sent to various ranches in Eastern Colorado and Wyoming for the meanest, toughest, most depraved outlaw "broncs" to be had. Everybody who saw the Wild West show at Roswell Park yesterday can testify that it is the real thing, and those who didn't see it will be there in force today and again on Friday and Saturday.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock the Pioneer and Civic parade will start from the corner of San Miguel and Cascade Avenue and repeat the triumph of the Automobile parade yesterday. At 3:30 there will be another Wild West Show at Roswell Park, with the Indian Delegation to add Western color. At 8 o'clock this evening, the reception to the Pioneer Association will be held at the Court House. If your business interferes with your pleasure this week, quit the business and give yourself up to the pursuit of a good time. It's the only sensible thing to do besides, it's what everybody else is doing.

POST CARD ADVERTISING

IT IS always a difficult matter to determine the benefits of a publicity campaign with any degree of definiteness, especially until after the campaign is ended. But the responses already received from the distribution of the Chamber of Commerce post cards in July, show that the results abundantly justify the expenditure. The manner of distribution was such that practically the entire issue found its way into the hands of people who might be induced to visit Colorado Springs.

A few days ago two women called at the Chamber of Commerce to secure some of the new cards. One of them remarked that she had already sent out several of each of the previous issues, and on being asked if she knew whether they had produced results, pointed to her companion and replied "Yes, here is one of the results." Several other cases have been reported of visitors who have come to Colorado Springs as a direct result of this advertising, and if the facts were accurately known it probably would be shown that the patronage already induced has been many times greater than the expenditure.

ACCIDENTS AND HISTORY.

From the New York Evening Post.

What would history do without accidents? Here, for instance, in the last number of the Twentieth Century Magazine, is Henry George, Jr.'s, account of the turning-point in the career of Tom L. Johnson: "Had he not taken a railroad journey on a certain day; or, taking that journey, had he not been offered a certain book by the train newsboy, the whole course of his life might have been changed." For the book was Henry George's "Social Problems." It is easy to suggest the possibilities of his coming upon the book or some other that would have had the same effect upon him, at another time and place, but who will say that just that difference of time might not make all the difference between a still impressionable mind and one that was confirmed in a round of thought to which antimonopolistic doctrine would have seemed not a new light, but a dangerous will-o'-the-wisp? Some of Mr. George's other "accidents" are less convincing. "Had not the brilliant, reckless, wayward Leo Tolstoi had his intense sympathies arrested by a few individual cases of brutalizing poverty in the sea of misery surging around the imperial splendors of the ancient Russian capital," he thinks, "humanity might not have been blessed with the glory of that peerless latter-day moralist and seer. Had King Charles' warship not turned back the little vessel that was about to carry the obscure Oliver Cromwell from the country of his birth to America, that sovereign might have died a natural death with his head on his shoulders, and the mighty trend of events in England have taken an entirely different course." He even puts Caesar's fateful decision at the Rubicon among the accidents of history.

It would be hard to find an incident, however, that has about it less of the accidental than Caesar's action upon that occasion, and somewhat the same consideration applies to the fate of Charles I. The Tolstoi illustration is of a different nature. It is difficult, if not downright impossible, to believe that the long, varied, and impressive expression of a mighty soul was absolutely dependent upon the seeing of "a few individual cases of brutalizing poverty." Mr. George's own words make it more difficult. It was the "intense sympathies" in the heart of the man whose eyes looked upon the brutalized individuals that were the real force behind his transformation. If not these individuals, there must have been others. Brutalizing poverty was not so rare in Moscow and Russia as to make the evocation of Russia's greatest spirit a matter of chance. There is a further distinction between the case of the book that fell into Tom Johnson's hands at the right moment and that of the sufferers who came under Tolstoi's observation. The American was a man of narrow intelectual range, seeing what was near him, but not given to looking before and after. Such a man is far more the sport of fate in his mental developments than one who, like the gifted Russian, not only looked but saw, and seeing, looked again.

The truth is that there are accidents and accidents. There is the accident of an Edison catching an odd sound in the telephone that sends him to his workshop to invent the phonograph, and there is the accident of "Stonewall" Jackson receiving the fatal fire of his own men. There is the accident of Thomas Ellwood asking "What hast thou to say of paradise regained?", of Blucher's timely arrival at Waterloo, of Newton's conveniently falling apple, of James Watt's uneasy teakettle lid. Some of these are accidents pure and simple, involving consequencies that in all probability would not have occurred without them. But most of them seem not so much accidents as occasions, not so much uniquely fortuitous happenings as events that, while they did indeed provoke momentous results, are themselves to be congratulated upon their good fortune in being connected with those results. Can anyone maintain, for example, that without that fall of the apple Newton would never have discovered the law of gravitation? Such an incident may have been a starting point for the series of investigations, calculations, and reasonings that plucked out the heart of the ancient mystery, but we need be under no illusions as to its importance.

At the same time it would be idle to deny the part that accident does play in history. With all allowances for our inability to say just what might or might not have been if something else had not been, it is impossible to ignore the fact that many events have been dependent upon the deus ex machina of accident. Whether the war of 1812 was due to a pig, which, caught in a fence, prevented its owner from casting the ballot that would have elected the congressman whose single vote would have defeated the proposal, may be doubtful; but that the Chicago fire, with all that it meant of immediate distress and ultimate improvement, was caused by the inadvertent contact between another animal and a lantern, is undisputed. In a larger way, we speak of the fortunate accident that gave us so many men of commanding ability at the time of the formation of the federal constitution, and we might equally bemoan the adverse accident of being without them during the period of reconstruction. But this would be to inquire too curiously.

THE PEACE OF THE WORLD.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

In an address at Atlantic City the other day the president remarked that such arbitration treaties as he is concluding will not necessarily abolish war, but will provide a most effective and forcible instrument for preventing it.

That is a very conservative statement of the case. Great nations do not now violate treaties, or even, when dealing with other strong nations, usually seek to evade them. The conclusion of such a treaty as that now apparently ready for signature with Great Britain would render war between the parties to it extremely improbable.

But the conclusion of such treaties does much more than that. It tends to create throughout the world a public sentiment which will soon make barbarity impossible. War is barbarism pure and simple, a survival of the instincts of the cave man.

And the masses of the people of the civilized world who bear its burdens are determined to be done with it, regardless of the theories of philosophers or the ambitions of statesmen.

Much is said about the assurance which great armaments give of the maintenance of peace.

But the plain people of the world are of the opinion that, regardless of the efficiency of armaments as peacemakers, the absence of armaments is a much better assurance.

And there are some who say, and even openly declare, that the greatest obstacles to arbitration agreements are the owners of the great plants for the manufacture of engines of destruction.

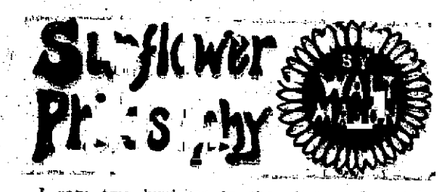

We do not know that this is so, and have seen no evidence to induce conviction that the manufacturers of war material are conducting a campaign in the interest of war, but one can hear it intimated in almost any discussion of the subject.

And there is no doubt that the total abolition of war would enormously increase the ranks of the unemployed until new and more useful occupation could be provided.

But the world could afford, for a reasonable time, to continue the payments to those who live by war and the preparation for it, even if they did nothing. They would at least be doing nothing harmful, and the national expenses would not be increased.

Unfortunately there is no hope that war will come to so sudden an end as to make it necessary to consider such results. Reduction in military expenditures will come slowly, but it will come, because the people of all countries are determined that it shall come.

Sunflower Philosophy

I saw two bruisers in the ring, and watched them biff, and heard them bing. Two humans much like wild beast grown; their heads were largely made of bone; each had a bobcat's vicious face; they represented all that's base. They were not stirred by martial fire, nor were they full of manly ire; they fought to win the golden bone; they slugged for cash, and cash alone. I watched the blow, I heard the thud, and saw the fighters streaked with blood; I heard them gasp and moan and snort, and sighed: "Great whiskers! Is this sport?" A bard must thump his harp in vain; he can't produce a sounding strain about a sordid scrap like that; the theme is bald and pale and flat. Macaulay well might write his lays of fighting men of olden days, who held the bridge against a host, and then became the Roman boast. And Homer had an easy snap; a poet can embalm a scrap when they who fight are after fame, or slug because they love the game. But where's the bard to twang a lyre with any show of zeal or fire for low browed bruisers of the sort that fights for scads and calls it sport?

THE PRIZE FIGHT.

Copyright, 1910, by [illegible] Mason

You are angry. "Hurt," you call it. As a matter of fact, that way of expressing it is merely a graceful fashion of implying that the blame of your disgruntled state of mind belongs with someone else.

And in the absence of the friend who has angered, or rather "hurt" you, you are going over in your mind your side of the case.

You mentally rehearse what you would like to say to her:

"I had a headache when I got up and yet I worked hard all day," you justify yourself. "And then everything went wrong. There I walked way down to the dressmakers in the broiling sun and she disappointed me, and then just as I was trying to get a little nap, that woman from the church called to ask if I wouldn't give something for the next supper, and to cap the climax, that meat for dinner was bad and I had to walk 'way down to the market for more and the man was rude to me. So when she called me up, I was just as tired and nervous as I could be and my head was simply splitting. And to have her say that she thought I ought to do something more on that committee, was just the last straw. When you think of what I've done already. And now she thinks I ought to say I'm sorry I spoke out as I did. Goodness, I think it's she that ought to be sorry. And I thought she was fond of me. If she knew all I've been through with today and all I've done on that old committee, I guess she'd feel ashamed of the way she spoke."

Such is your natural train of thought.

From it you emerge more "hurt" than ever and more determined not to say you are sorry, but instead to extort such an admission from her.

I know, you see, for I have traveled on the same train.

But listen, my friend. From the same station from which that train departs, another one goes out at the same moment. Very few people take it, so if you do, you will have a novel experience.

It is the train of thought that leads into the land of the other side of the question.

That is, instead of trying to marshal all the conditions that make you excusable, this time you are to try to marshal all the conditions that make your friend excusable.

You are to say to yourself, "She is really much more tired than I am. She works under a terrible strain all the time in that hurried, noisy, hot office. Besides, this is just the last week before her vacation and she is at the end of her rope. And then she has had that anxiety about her mother the last few months. I suppose, too, the chairmanship of that committee was altogether too much for her to have to do, and besides she didn't really know how much I had done. It was easy to see from what she said that some one had deceived her or made a mistake. So I suppose she thought she was being perfectly reasonable and when I snapped out so, she felt that I was unjust. And then she didn't know how tired I was and that I had a headache and anyway she may have had a terrible hard day herself. So I suppose she has not a reason for thinking I ought to say I'm sorry."

Altogether, your grievance has a very different aspect when you emerge from this train of thought, hasn't it?

And yet the facts haven't changed a bit—only your way of looking at them and for them.

Which train will you take, my friend?

Yes, it certainly requires more courage and altruism and more of a sense of justice and fairness, than the average person has to climb into that second train.

But surely you are glad of an opportunity to prove that you have all that?

In the Early Days

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY

August 1, 1881.

Professor Proctor of Manitou, whose sanity had recently been investigated by the authorities, announced that he had perfected a scheme for extracting silver from some of the flooded Leadville mines by adding sulphuric acid to the water, which would cause the silver to dissolve in it.

The city council held their monthly meeting and transacted routine business.

The Rev. W. L. Sluts and family and Mrs. Horn left for Leadville to attend the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The lot on the northwest corner of Tejon and Bijou streets was sold by Dr. Coombs to Alfred F. Carpenter for $6,000.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

August 1, 1891.

The youngest person ever on the summit of Pikes Peak went up on this date. She was Ethel Taminosian, aged 16 months.

Dr. E. G. Walls received notice of his appointment as an honorary member of the Chaffee Light artillery, Denver.

It was announced that work on the Union Printers home was progressing rapidly, and rules for admission of applicants to the home and for its management were given out.

Swastika Number Seven

History has always attached much importance to the Number Seven. "Of all numbers there is no one which commanded, in a higher degree, the esteem and reverence of mankind." The Gazette has taken this charmed number, and has woven into stories on a variety of subjects a Series of Sevens, beginning each Monday and continuing during the week.

NO. 2—ST. ANTHONY OF ITALY

In yesterday's story of St. Denis, the patron saint of France, it was related how the seven champions of christendom came together, and how they fought over a great part of the then known world in defense of the faith. It was related how, when the seven champions started on their crusade, they parted at a point where seven different ways met, St. Denis finally reaching Thessaly.

St. Anthony's way took him to Thrace, and it was there he spent seven years' travel to the honor of his country, the glory of God, and to his own lasting renown. Toward its conclusion one day he approached a tall mountain, on which, in a magnificent castle, dwelt the giant Blanderon, who, angry at the intrusion, attempted to put an end to the champion of Italy. St. Anthony was able to escape all the blows directed by Blanderon, until the giant was entirely exhausted, whereupon he was compelled to leave his oak fall, and stood gasping for breath. The champion observing this, began his attack, and it was so successful that the giant, for want of breath, and through the anguish of his wounds, was forced to bid the world farewell and to yield the riches of his castle to the most renowned conqueror, St. Anthony, the champion of Italy.

St. Anthony was so exhausted, at the end of the encounter, that he lay upon the ground and fell asleep. Fair Rosalinde, one of the daughters of the Thracian king, who was a prisoner in the castle, looking over the walls espied the headless body of the giant, and ran with all speed to the adventurous champion. She bathed his tired brow and upon his awaking, together they went into the castle. After surveying its mysteries and magnificence, they locked the place and started for the Thracian court. Upon their arrival they found that the bells were being tolled, and in answer to an inquiry learned that it was to show the grief of the king at the loss of his daughters.

When the news of the marriage of the emperor of Greece reached Thrace St. Anthony, accompanied by Rosalinde, set out to attend the ceremony, where the other six champions were to be present. On the third day of the tournament, arranged in honor of the wedding, St. Anthony was chief challenger. His tent was the color of the skies, his steed was furnished with costly habiliments, his armor after the fashion of Barbary, upon his shield was painted a golden eagle in a field of blue, which signified the ancient arms of Rome, and his matchless chivalry for that day won the prize from all the Grecian knights.

The nuptial ceremony was hardly over until the seven champions received news of open warfare against all christendom. The knights took a speedy departure. After some days they arrived in the spacious bay of Portugal, in which haven they vowed, by the honor of true knighthood, to meet again within six months, there to join all their Christian armies into legions.

Upon St. Andrew's arrival home, the Christian king of his country appointed a mighty army of well approved soldiers to defeat the infidels' wicked intention. The fourth of the champions to arrive at the place of meeting was St. Anthony, the champion of Italy, with a band of fourscore thousand brave Italian soldiers, mounted on warlike coursers; every horseman attended by a negro, bearing in his hand a streamer of azure silk, with the arms of Italy set thereon in gold.

Everywhere the seven knights and their armies were able to defeat the infidels until they finally reached Constantinople. Here it was destined the seven champions should part never to meet again. St. Anthony was the fifth to start for home, which he reached after a long journey. Although feeble with age, he set out to spend his remaining days viewing the beauties of Rome. While doing so he came to a chapel dedicated to himself, called "The Honour of St. Anthony," wherein was portrayed in alabaster pictures, the forms of all the champions of christendom, with the stories of their adventures. Here he read the prophecy that the chapel should ever live unconquered, and never embrace death, till his eyes were witness of the same portraitures. When St. Anthony beheld this, knowing himself to be the man, with a firm mind he embraced his end, and never departed from the chapel, but remained kneeling there upon the bare marble till pale destiny had cut off the thread of his old days. And thus, being converted to earth, the emperor caused him to be entombed in the chapel, and over his grave to be set a magnificent chair, in which, for many years after, the Roman conquerors received their laurel rewards of victory.

Tents and Ruin Follow in Wake of Texas Storm

ABILENE, Tex., July 31.—Two persons are known to have been killed, a score injured and practically every business house in Abilene is more or less damaged as the result of a storm of wind and hail which swept over this vicinity tonight. A number of residences were also wrecked.

Dr. Hollis, a widely-known physician, is one of the dead. He was struck by a falling timber. The city is in darkness. Electric and telephone wires are strewn over the streets, and, with the exception of one wire to Fort Worth, over the Texas & Pacific railroad, telegraphic communication is cut off.

The storm was particularly destructive in the northeastern part of the city. Many business houses and the brick walls of many buildings were blown down, and scores of roofs went.

The storm raged with equal fury in other parts of Taylor county. Farmers from places three and four miles north bring stories of wholesale destruction of property.

The lightning during the storm was unusually severe. It struck and set fire to one house, but rain followed within five minutes and put out the flames.

Southern Cotton Mills Shut Down Account Drought

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 31.—As a climax to the unprecedented drought this section is experiencing, 152 cotton mills in North and South Carolina shut down today because the water in Catawba river is so low the Southern Power company cannot supply the plants with power. It is estimated that 70,000 operatives are thrown out of work, but it is believed work will be resumed in two days.

It has been many weeks since rain of any consequence has fallen, and creeks which have not gone dry in 45 years are mudholes. Mountain streams to the west upon which many flouring mills, tanneries and cotton mills are dependent for power have dwindled to mere brooks, and many of the manufacturing enterprises have been forced to shut down.

Crops are burning up in the fields, while hot winds are playing havoc with cotton.

Cities and towns north and west of Charlotte are facing such a water famine as this city is now experiencing. At Greensboro, Salisbury, Concord, Spencer, Monroe, Wadesboro and other places the situation is grave, and measures of economy are being rigidly enforced.

The situation in Charlotte has not improved materially. Offers of water from Gastonia, Shelby and Lincolnton were accepted tonight and local trains brought in 50,000 gallons from each place. This is being pumped in the city mains by means of fire engines.

CINCINNATI, July 31.—Cincinnati won a close game from Brooklyn today, 2 to 1. It was a pitchers' duel all the way, and Burke lost in the ninth, when he fielded Mitchell's fast drive to first instead of attempting to catch Downey at the plate. This allowed Downey to score the winning run. Grant was so badly spiked by Wheat in the fourth inning that he was carried from the field. He probably will be out of the game several weeks.

DENVER ELKS BREAKING GROUND FOR NEW HOME

DENVER, July 31.—A realization of the dreams of years began to materialize today when Denver Elks broke the ground at the corner of Fourteenth and California streets for the erection of a new home. The property has been owned by the Denver lodge of Elks for some years. Thomas M. Hunter, exalted ruler of the local lodge turned the first shovelful of dirt. The building will be three stories high of Italian Renaissance style and will cost approximately $125,000.

McLoughlin Wins Tennis Honors

LAKE FOREST, Ill., July 31.—Maurice McLoughlin of San Francisco won the western tennis championship in men's singles this afternoon at the Onwentsia club by defeating Thomas C. Bundy of Los Angeles, holder of the title, in three out of four sets 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

The lack of tournament practice on the part of the Los Angeles player was painfully apparent, for although the match was not hard, he tired quickly after the first set, and after half of the second was over, was hopelessly out of the running.

He made a desperate effort to get the advantage in the third set of the afternoon, but it was merely a spurt, and the superior stamina of the younger man told. Neither man played good tennis after the first set.

Drawing for the national doubles preliminaries to be played tomorrow were announced as follows:

R. D. Little and Gustave Touchard, east, vs. T. C. Bundy and Maurice McLoughlin, Pacific coast.

C. M. Bull, Jr., and Harry Martin, west, vs. Conrad B. Doyle and H. E. Doyle, south.

GRAND CIRCUIT RACE RESULTS

DETROIT, July 31.—Splendid racing and fast time characterized all four of the events on the program of the Grand Circuit meeting which began today at the state fair grounds. The big race of the day, the Chamber of Commerce $5,000 stake for 2:13 pacers, developed into a two-horse contest after the first heat, Vernon McKinney and Branham Baughman racing out in front of the field in each of the last three heats. The start of the race was delayed by the bad acting of Fanny Stanton. When the field finally got away the mare was so far behind that she never had a chance to catch up.

After finishing fifth in the initial heat, Vernon McKinney came to the front and took the next three, closely pressed all the way by Branham Baughman, who in view of his stake-winning performance in the last two starts, was the pick of the field. Results.

Trotting, 2:13 class, purse $1,000, three in five—Gordon Todd, won second, third and fourth heats and race. Best time, 2:13¼. Lady McKinney won first heat. Time, 2:14¼. Sid Anna won third place.

Chamber of Commerce $5,000 stake for 2:13 pacers, three in five—Vernon McKinney, brown stallion, by Guy McKinney, won second, third and fourth heats and race. Best time, 2:03¾. Branham Baughman, brown gelding, second; Peter Preston, third. Sir Okar, Billie and Fanny Stanton started.

Trotting, 2:07 class, purse $1,000, two in three—Sopranco won in straight heats. Best time, 2:05½. Dudie Archdale second, Spanish Queen third.

Pacing, 2:08 class—Hal B. Jr., won in straight heats. Best time, 2:05¼. Sunny Jim Second, Don third.

FOREST FIRES SPREADING

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., July 31.—The forest fires on the slopes of the San Bernardino mountain range spread steadily today. A brisk wind fanned the fires tonight.

The width of the fire belt is estimated at from three to five miles. Skyland and Chestlinea, two mountain resorts are directly in the path of the fire.

The giant pines above Squirrel Inn will be dynamited to check the flames.

The force combating the fire has been on duty continuously for 48 hours with but scant supplies of food. Scores of men utterly exhausted are struggling back to the city after having given up the fight.

What the Press Agents Say

SUMMER CARNIVAL OF SPORT AT MAJESTIC

The comedy features of the classy bill at the Majestic vaudeville theater this week make up a regular summer carnival of sport, furnishing enough laughs to last the average person for a week, but perhaps the funniest thing in the whole list is the juggling specialty of Charles D. Weber, a little man who has put an exceedingly fertile brain to use in devising an assortment of laugh-bringing novelties which never fail to produce all kinds of merriment during the whole 15 minutes that he is on the stage.

Weber makes his appearance in a miniature automobile, and gets off a lot of ridiculous stunts while preparing for action. Then he handles balls, hats and whatnot in a way that brings him round after round of applause, interspersed with frequent outbursts of laughter at his comical antics. One of his most remarkable juggling feats is that of starting plates to whirling with his fingers and finally having seven of them going at the same time, a stunt whose difficulty can only be understood when it is seen.

He has a whole lot of fun catching apples on a fork in his mouth, and so does the audience to whom he throws the fruit and from whom it usually comes back with such speed as to keep him dodging. Another of his novelties is drawing a cow on a blackboard and then actually milking the animal, although he doesn't drink the lacteal fluid the chalked creature yields. Weber's finale with his "highly trained troupe of trained hats," is a great audience pleaser and he is not only one of the hits of this fine bill, but one of the most popular performers who has been here in months.

Miss Sadie Sherman, the American maid, in her clever songs and phototypes, La Vier, a sensational foreign acrobat, Frank Graham and Edith Randall in "A Gay Old Boy;" Edward Barto and Florence Clark in "Sixty-five on the Second Floor Back," two motion picture plays, "The Rivals" and "The Vagabond," and the concert orchestra program complete this great carnival offering which can be seen for the trifling sum of 10, 20 and 30 cents. Performances at 2:30, 7:30 and 9:19 p. m.

AT THE LYRIC—EUGENE ELY FLIES FROM THE BATTLESHIP PENN IN FRISCO BAY

Don't miss seeing the great birdman, Eugene Ely, perform this wonderful act. In addition to this, a dandy Indian picture, "Rescued in Time," also "Scenes From Our Navy," showing an assemblage of the great dogs of war and in spectacular maneuvers, a subject that should be of absorbing interest to any American resounding strains of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Then a good live comedy, "The Reporter." The editor of the "Rising Sun," angry at a scoop of a rival paper, instructs his reporter to write up "How It Feels to Be a Burglar." The citizen, whose heart pulsates with the way to Mount Manitou Park.

reporter, in despair, accepts, dark lantern, and all the usual accompaniments.

Finding a ladder which some painters had left in front of a house, the reporter concludes that his chance has come climbs the ladder and enters the window. The room he enters is in semidarkness, and in his excitement he knocks over a chair. After recovering from his fright he seeks for a suitable article to take with him and concludes that the portieres will do. He lights a match and in the flare sees the face of a statue on a pedestal in front of him which puts him in a terrible scare. He backs into the piano, pulling a statue down, which falls crashing to the floor. The noise awakens Mr. and Mrs. Snow, he escaping down stairs, and she calling the police, but Snow's troubles had just begun, as Jones was on the job and finally succeeds in locking the frightened Snow up in a cabinet and escapes through the window just as the police enter the scene, and as a natural consequence, and for the good of the service, someone had to be arrested, so they take Snow, and the honor of the department is saved.

"THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES"

Meredith Nicholson's popular novel, "The House of a Thousand Candles," has been turned into a most excellent play. The Lorch Stock company is presenting it at the Opera House all this week, with matinees tomorrow and Saturday afternoons only. George Middleton, who dramatized the novel, has made fine use of the materials Nicholson furnished in his story. The play is as interesting as the novel, which is saying a great deal when one considers the holding power the novel has upon its readers.

About four years ago, Eleanor Robson, now retired from the stage, produced Paul Armstrong's dramatization of Bret Harte's charming story, "Salomy Jane." This play, as theatergoers will remember, has its scenes laid in the great outdoors of the California mountains, the Sierra Nevadas. Miss Robson, in order to add realism to the scene and produce the atmosphere of that wonderful pine-covered range, perfected an arrangement whereby she filled the auditorium of the theater with a certain sort of perfume, redolent of the pines.

In his production of "The House of a Thousand Candles," Mr. Lorch has rivaled Miss Robson's pine-atmosphere scent. The first and last acts of "The House of a Thousand Candles" shows the rose garden of Glenarm's home. Mr. Lorch has been able to make the audience not only feel but smell the roses. How this is done is, of course, a secret, but that it adds to the attractiveness of the offering goes without saying.

Watch for James Hawley in today's parade. Mr. Hawley, accompanied by S. F. Nifong, will drive—well, see it for yourself and you will say Hawley is as fine looking off the stage as he is on. What about those orange trousers, eh, Jimmy?

THE ONLY TRIP

S.S.S. FOR PERMANENT BLOOD DISEASES

No matter in what way an old sore or ulcer first commenced, whether from a wound, cut, or bruise, or from the ulceration of a wart, pimple or mole, or even if it came without apparent reason, the fact that it does not heal shows that bad blood is responsible for the place. While the circulation remains impure the nerves and tissues of the flesh around the place are constantly being fed with unhealthy matter and the fibres are thus prevented from knitting together and healing. Purify the blood and the place MUST heal, its cause having been removed. S. S. S. cures old sores and chronic ulcers because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers. It removes from the circulation every impurity, and so enriches the blood that it nourishes the tender, sensitive flesh, and causes a knitting together of all fibrous tissue and thus heals the place. Book on Sores and Ulcers and any medical advice free. S. S. S. is for sale at drug stores. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 31.—Conservation seems to rule on the stock market at present. Securities held firm in exceedingly light trade, the trend during the greater part of the session being distinctly upward.

The movement was most prominent in the specialties, such issues as Bethlehem Steel common and preferred, being most conspicuous, with gains of 1⅞ and 1⅝, respectively.

The speculative leaders gained fractionally for the most part, although advances of a point or more were recorded by Union Pacific, Illinois Central, Rock Island preferred, Chicago & Northwestern and Great Northern Ore. United States Steel was consistently strong, despite the resumption tomorrow of hearings by the congressional investigating committee. Developments included the publication of the Standard Oil circular to its stockholders, announcing the determination of the company to comply with the mandate of the United States supreme court which ordered the dissolution of that corporation. Standard Oil shares sold at 655 on the curb today, compared with 650 last Saturday. The protective committees organized to serve the interests of the American Tobacco company also issued their plans of agreement and asked for power to formulate plans of reorganization.

Advices from the middle west and other important railway centers are to the effect that trade revival is looked for. The grain movement continues unusually heavy, receipts at Chicago last week being almost 2,000,000 bushels over the same week last year.

The bond market was irregular. American Tobacco issues showing marked heaviness. Total sales, par value, $2,020,000.

United States bonds unchanged on call.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, July 31.—Nearly 7,000,000 bushels increase today in the visible supply of wheat burdened the market. Closing figures were at a shade to ⅝c net decline. Latest trading left corn a sixteenth to ⅜c easier, oats off ⅛@⅜c to ⅝c and hog products varying from 12½ to 15c lower to a rise of 2½c.

The decided enlargement of the visible supply made the total amount of wheat immediately available 41,316,000 bushels, an aggregate more than three times as much as there was on hand at the corresponding time a year ago. However, primary receipts showed a large falling off. Before the weight of the visible supply changes began to be felt, sentiment was generally bullish, though interest seemed to lag when the seaboard announced no response to cable offerings of exports, a condition which acted as an offset to estimates that they claimed in Kansas would be surprisingly small. September fluctuated between 89⅝ and 90⅞c, closing firm, but ⅛c net lower at 89⅜@⅝c.

Fine weather weakened the corn market. September ranged from 63⅛@⅝c to 64c and closed steady at 63⅝@⅝c, a net loss of ⅛c. Cash grades were easier. No. 2 yellow finished at 63¼@½c.

Heavy arrivals pulled oats lower. High and low points touched by September delivery turned out to be 41@41⅛c and 40⅜, with the close 40⅜c, a decline of ⅜c under Saturday night's finish.

In provisions there were signs that the shorts on near months had covered. Accordingly when the pit was cleared pork was down 5 to 12½ to 15c and lard a shade to 2½c. For ribs the outcome as chalked on the boards wobbled from 5 off to 12½c.

WHAT'S THE USE

Of coming all the way to Colorado and not seeing the grandest part of it. There is nothing on this continent to equal "The Cripple Creek trip."

DOG GUARDS MASTER'S BODY

KANSAS CITY, July 31.—A dog sitting beside a body lying on the banks of the Blue river, near Dodson, south of here, today, attracted the attention of a crowd of boys to the corpse of its master, "Uncle Jack" Swartzel, an old Union soldier. The top of his head had been blown off, evidently by the charge from a shotgun.

"Uncle Jack," who drew a pension, was known to carry a large sum of money on his person, and it is believed that robbery was the motive for the murder. The old man was last seen early today when he started toward the river with his fishing tackle.

When the deputy coroner began searching the old man's clothing, it took two men to hold the dog, which did its best to keep the officers from touching its master.

CIRCUS HAS MANY THRILLS

Sensational Performance Is Given by Adam Forepaugh and Sells Bros.' Show.

The man who holds there is nothing new under the sun will quickly change his views if he visits the Great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' circus in Colorado Springs on Tuesday, August 8. It is one good bet that he will open his eyes in astonishment for he will see more circus sights than he thought the world contained.

The performance is introduced by a new and elaborate spectacle. The various acts that follow are given in three rings on two stages in the dome of the tent and on an immense hippodrome track. In the nature of thrillers there are at least seven distinct sensations. Principal among them is the superb Parisian aerial spectacle, produced for the first time in France last winter and known as "The Human Butterfly Act." Its originators are the Ty-Bell Sisters, the most beautiful of all aerial performers. They are repeating their great act now in America, exactly as it was given in the big cities of Europe.

Holding by dental strength to slender steel threads, these sylph-like maidens are elevated to the dome of the tent. By means of hidden mechanism above them they are made to circumnavigate the dome of the tent, darting, flying and pironetting with the grace of birds. They are called "butterflies" because their garments are fashioned to represent the fluttering and outstretched brilliant wings of these most beautiful of all insects. During their performance, traveling spotlights, kaleidoscopic lanterns and colored calciums bathe their gossamer-like robes with the various brilliant and elaborate designs painted by Mother Nature on the wings of the butterfly. The spectacle is ethereal in its beauty, while the daring and the danger involved in the execution of the act are appalling.

Here is a thriller in the truest sense of the word, and not merely a "machine" act which looks ghastly, but is harmless. While spectators are admiring the dazzling beauty of the sight, they are at the same time quaking with suspense and trembling in absolute fear lest the three young women high above them fall to their death.

Another thriller of the morbid and sensational type is introduced by a young French girl who makes a frightful dash down a steep incline and a mid-air double somersault in an automobile. Here is the climax of all thrillers and a sure-fire nerve wracker.

A WONDERFUL SIGHT

Aside from the unequaled scenic grandeur of the trip, the Cripple Creek district itself is "one of the world's famous show places."

Peanut Butter

Heinz Peanut Butter is made from the finest selected Virginia peanuts, roasted at the Heinz factory.

They are carefully carded to remove the heart seed. This means a lot of extra bother but improves the flavor and is typical of the Heinz care and thoroughness. It is this exacting care which has made for Heinz products their wonderful reputation.

The peanuts are carefully ground and only the natural oil of the nuts is used.

There is no foreign matter or preservative used in Heinz Peanut Butter. It is a nourishing, delicious, healthful substitute for butter.

In glass jars, 15c, 20c and 35c.

Bread certainty

No matter how good a cook you may be you cannot always be sure of good bread.

An interruption, forgetfulness, unavoidable neglect, sometimes spoil your week's baking.

If you gave your whole attention to bread-making you could turn out good bread every time.

That's just what our baker does. Bread-making is a science with him. He devotes his whole time to it.

He bakes thousands of loaves a day. Weighs each ingredient to insure exactness. Has a home kitchen with every labor and time-saving convenience installed.

He uses a good home receipt and follows it closely.

Day after day, loaf after loaf, his bread is uniformly good.

Three ten-cent loaves or six five-cent loaves for a quarter make home baking an expensive proposition and nothing gained by it.
